

CULLEN and DYKMAN LLP

Clients

Cullen & Dykman takes great satisfaction in the successes of its clients, both individual and corporate, over the last 167 years.

The firm and its partners have played major roles in government, in business and in the legal profession in the State, New York City and on Long Island. Beginning with Judge McCue, who in 1867 chaired the committee which selected John Roebling as engineer for the proposed Brooklyn Bridge, through its representation of numerous financial institutions, including predecessors of what are now BNY Mellon and Chase Bank, Cullen and Dykman LLP has been at the forefront of the steady developments in government and commerce.
